ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

Newfoundland Caribou Herds.

Many readers of Forest and Stream will remember an account of a great deer slaughter near Burges, which appeared in your columns last year. It was estimated that 3,200 caribou were killed in a day or two. The legislature, then in session, passed restrictive measures, making a recurrence of such slaughter impossible.

Representative Moulton, of Burges, during the present session, presented a number of numerous signed petitions, praying that the deer law be amended and the restrictions removed. In support of his position he quoted some facts about our caribou that were enlightening to the average sportsman. It has been always known that vast herds of deer existed, but as the railway went through the interior of the island and opened it up somewhat, the account of occasional hunters as to the number of deer were taken cum grano salis. Mr. Moulton, besides being a hunter of experience himself, had a lot to do with hunters in his district, and is well qualified to speak with authority on the question of deer. He stated in the assembly of his own knowledge and the evidence of many hunters whom he had questioned, that the number of deer at present ranging the interior amounted to about 250,000—a quarter of a million. The natural increase yearly he sets down as 25,000. The number killed by local and foreign sportsmen annually amounts to 10,000; about 5,000 die each year from wolves and natural causes, leaving a net increase of 10,000 caribou annually added to the herd. He contended that for the preservation of the caribou, they should be judiciously thinned each year, as the herds range over vast plains, feeding on mosses, which they tear up by the roots, thus destroying the natural pastures. Many sportsmen differ with him on this point, and refer to the vast extent of territory which they range, the better part of 42,000 square miles. This country, consisting largely of marshes and barrens, is eminently adapted for feeding grounds; and, further, the parasitic plants upon which they feed are so prolific and tenacious of life that nothing less than plowing them up would destroy them. The decimation of our caribou on these grounds need not be feared for many a day.

It is the intention of the legislature to appoint a commission to consider the whole question, and at a future session of the House to make recommendations that will appear most advantageous from the evidence laid before them. In the meantime, the law stands, and the caribou are protected, and any sportsman who wants to experience the pleasure of stalking his caribou and securing a trophy for his hall or den will find plenty of sport on the island for many years to come.

Last week I was talking to Mr. George Nichols of Deer Lake, one of the most active and intelligent guides in the country. Mr. Nichols left me at Deer Lake and went in the country for some distance to take up his traps after the winter. On one marsh, about three miles distant, he counted over ninety caribou grazing, like cattle, in a pasture; he had no gun along with him and did not disturb them.

The moose imported last year were seen a short time ago near the Upper Hubbard and are reported as doing very well. Correspondence in Forest and Stream.

Hats and Horns.

Sienna, Italy, is famous for the large hats of its women and the long horns of its cattle. The hats which we know in America as Leghorn hats are a peculiar product of Sienna, although they are known abroad by the name of the city from which they are exported.

The French Partridge.

The French partridge must look upon the rabbit as a true friend, for the bird has no compunction in making use of its burrow as a place of refuge in times of necessity.

Brigadier Sugar Cake.

The late General Maximo Gomez once caught one of his brigadiers selling brown sugar to the Spaniards. Gomez stripped the traitor of his stars and said, "From this time forth you are Brigadier Raspadura," which, translated, is Brigadier Sugar Cake.

The First Printed Pages.

The first printers used only one side of a page, then pasted together the two blank pages to give the impression of one leaf.

A Deadly Trade.

Quicksilver miners follow the most unhealthy trade in the world. The teeth of an employee drop out, owing to the fumes of the mercury producing constant salivation, and the system becomes permeated with the metal.

How Confetti Was First Made.

A European firm engaged in printing and turning out thousands of almanacs, in which eyelet holes were punched, discovered confetti accidentally. The tiny colored disks were thrown about by the work girls, and the proprietor saw their decorative possibilities. He tried his idea. It caught on to such an extent that soon he had to stop printing and devote himself to confetti making.

The Spanish Flag.

The simple striping of the red and yellow in the flag of Spain was suggested by the arms of Aragon.

The Tranquil Fathers.

Paris possesses a curious social organization with an odd purpose. It is a band of prosperous tradesmen who agree to trade with one another to the utmost extent possible and when necessary to help one another with loans without interest. The clique calls itself "The Tranquil Fathers."
